INTRODUCTION.

This volume is in part the result of a necessity for a complete and convenient index of the town records of births, marriages and deaths, a necessity which became apparent whenever there was occasion to look up a family record either for legal or genealogical purposes. The former volume, (The History of Seymour,) contained the genealogies of such families, bearing names which had long been represented among the freeholders of the territory represented, as were then available in the time at the disposal of the compiler. That work is now so effectually supplemented in these pages as to render the extension of those genealogies an easy matter, besides giving the records of hundreds of families not mentioned there.

These pages have been compiled entirely from original records, commencing with the authorized records of the town, including so much as could be found in the parish records, the inscriptions in the cemeteries before the incorporation of the town, and such other sources as were found reliable.

More than one thousand family names are given, and over five thousand individual names are indexed, with more than ten thousand references.

It is hardly possible that the transcription of so many names, dates and ages has been done entirely without error, but it is confidently believed that the errors are few and that the copy is in many respects more nearly perfect than some of the originals. In explanation of this statement it should be said that the records bear evidence in some places of having been copied from the original certificates by some one unfamiliar with the names, many of them being so misspelled as to be unrecognizable, and in copying for these pages the errors have been corrected as far as practicable. For instance, a name plainly written as McCavity is found to represent McCarthy, Ruchel for Buchele, Monwhiler for Manweiler, Arriah for Amelia, Donoper for Donahue, Mullerday for Mulready, Evangeline and Lella for Charlotte, M. J. for Ida J., &c. But no such correction was made without a certainty as to the right.

In the lists of births the words marked [a] are supplied by the compiler from family and other records.

In the list of deaths, from the town records, the place of birth and residence at time of death is given when other than Seymour, and also the occupation, when stated in the original entry. Previous to 1869 the relationship of deceased persons was not recorded by the registrar.

In reprinting the records the spelling has usually been followed, with exceptions aforesaid, but in indexing different names known to refer to the same person or family are indexed as one—for instance: Fanny, Fannie and Frances; and the names Kinney, Kinny and Kenney are copied as found on a row of tombstones, but are indexed alike.

Many inquiries were sent out, and the responses received, and the family records copied furnished data for the insertion of many of the names that were lacking.

Some names will be missed which may at first thought be expected to be found in the following pages, but it should be remembered that they are a record only of what has occurred here, that parties married in other towns will find their marriages recorded only in the town where the ceremony was performed. Births and deaths have not always been recorded by the parties cognizant of the facts, and in one case the sudden death of a physician prevented returns which would otherwise doubtless have been made. With these brief explanations the work is respectfully submitted to a discriminating public.

PREFACE.

The town records of births, marriages and deaths, as well as church records of baptisms, marriages and burials, are of great value to any community and should be preserved with the greatest care. They are continually referred to for various purposes, in making applications for pensions, in the settlement of estates, in deciding questions of town responsibility, and in the increasing demand for genealogical information. The publication of these records not only adds greatly to their availibility, but by the large number published and scattered abroad prevents the possibility of their total destruction, a misfortune which in the past has been of frequent occurrence, few old towns or churches having complete records of this kind. The complete index at the close of this volume brings all the names given in each family in a group and solves some questions arising from misspelled names in the original record, which might be corrected in the index but not in the transcript from the original. The first volume of vital statistics of the Town of Seymour, published in 1881, was, so far as we are informed, the first of the kind in the state with a single exception, that of the Woodbury records, published by Hon. William Cothren in 1879, which though it lacks an index, is a work of inestimable value to genealogists and others who have occasion to study the records of that ancient town.

Among so many names some are curiously spelled but they are according to the records. It is the rule of the registrars to make the entries strictly according to the certificates returned by clergymen and physicians, who in some cases find it difficult to ascertain the correct spelling, especially with those who are not familiar with the English language. The purpose of these pages is not to correct errors in spelling or omissions of initials, etc., but to give a correct copy of the original records and in such form as to be most convenient for reference. In the index, where there are two or more spellings of a name, cross references are made.
